

The Coors Triple Crown of Surfing

By Joe Teipel

They're coming. The surfers are coming in droves! And so are the big waves! Get your cars tuned up and engines started for the trek to Oahu's famed North Shore. Turn on and tune in your radio to hear the happenings about the biggest and the best.

Yes, folks, once again, December is professional surfing month in Hawaii, the surfing capital of the world. The Coors Triple Crown of Surfing offers the best professional and amateur surfers assaulting the biggest, best and most challenging waves on the planet Earth.

Some of you have missed it, I mean really missed it. You shoulda been there for the last 15-plus years. Yes, some of you have actually lived here in Hawaii that long or longer and have never (yet) treated yourself to the best breathtaking spectator adventure available — and it's free.

Those of you who have, know that it's an exciting scene — not just for the incredible pomp and circumstance but for the sheer, unadulterated thrill that these Triple Crown events provide.

World champion Mark Richards.

Note in your calendar and time organizer December 1st-January 4th. Then tune into various local radio stations (KPOI 98 Rock FM your best source) for daily updates — what contest is on or postponed, the site selected, the conditions for the meet, etc. You can also call the KPOI Surf-line, 538-7131, for updates.

All events are ASP-A rated class act quality and feature trials everytime. The Billabong Hawaiian Pro is slated first, followed by the Marui Offshore Pipeline Masters and then the World Cup for Men and Women.

Also, you can all come down to Aloha Tower, Friday night, January 2, 1987, for the official Coors Triple Crown and meet the pros as well as practically every surfer and surf-groupie imaginable.

Take advantage of this unique and thrilling opportunity in the world of surf contest spectatorship. I'll be keeping you updated on the radio, the surf-line, the mass media, and on-site as well. See you this month in the sun, sand and surf for the 1986 Coors Triple Crown of Surfing.