

Ron Sorrell to retire as Pro-Surfing Boss

Ron Sorrell, commissioner of the International Professional Surfers Assoc. for the past four years, has announced his retirement. Sorrell was instrumental in getting the professional surfing organization a charter and in selling the concept to corporate sponsors around the world.

Sorrell says the progress the professional surfing movement has made in the past four years has come from the unselfish time spent by club members: Ron Haworth, Bob Wilson and Fred Hemmings, Jr.
