

The OCC Golf Club is back in the swing

By Chris Worrall

After declining participation in 1998, OCC Golf Club member Phil Sevier has stepped up to the teebox to drive the OCC Golf Club back into full swing. He has reformed the committee with other golf enthusiasts like Richard Ferguson, Bill Tetmeyer, and May Balding, to name a few.

In December, they attacked the links at Kapolei for their first successful outing. Phil next organized a fantastic Valentine's tournament at the Navy Marine Golf Course. The next course to feel the bite of our divots was Midpac Country Club during our March outing. Then, a rousing round in early April at Oahu Country Club left all participants craving more.

The tentative schedule includes outings almost every month for the rest of the year with a variety of tournament formats to keep things interesting for novice and experienced players alike. One of the many advantages of the OCC Golf Club is the Club offers a venue for you to keep and track your handicap while playing alongside some terrific local talent.

For the complete scoop leave your name at the Front Desk and Phil Sevier will forward you the details, then you can come on out and play with the other Outrigger Canoe Club Golf enthusiasts.
