

TWO EXCURSIONS 700 PEOPLE IN EACH

The following is Promotion Secretary Wood's report for the week:

Chairman and Members Hawaii Promotion Committee.

Gentlemen: In our Press News Sheet for this week, we have an extended write-up of Mr. J. E. Higgins' address on mango and alligator pear possibilities in Hawaii. Besides mailing this sheet to our regular list of papers, we are sending out marked copies to every agricultural paper published in the United States and Canada, as well as to the leading nurserymen and prominent dealers in fruit and produce.

The following letter from Mr. Frank C. Clark and program for Honolulu are of general interest:

"Mr. H. P. Wood, Secretary, The Hawaii Promotion Committee, Honolulu, Hawaii.

"My Dear Mr. Wood:

"You have been so very kind in assisting to straighten out matters for our around the world cruises that I take the liberty of enclosing duplicate programs for Honolulu and if any suggestions or corrections occur to you I should feel very greatly obliged if you will jot down any such corrections on one of the enclosed copies and return it to us, as we want to print a little program before the ship leaves here to be placed at the plate of each passenger the night before arriving in each port.

"We shall have 700 on the first cruise and a full ship of 750 including conductors on the second cruise.

"Yours very sincerely,

FRANK C. CLARK.

PROGRAM FOR HONOLULU.

Clark's Cruise Around the World, No. 1

pleasant. The combination of excellent features is what pleases patrons and draws them to the spot.

Wear Summer Clothing.

Arrive at dock Sunday, January 23rd about 6 a. m. Leave Monday, January 24th, 5 p. m. sharp.

Sunday—Breakfast at 7 and 7:45 a. m. Walk ashore and up two blocks, where special trolley cars will be waiting. We have arranged with the Rapid Transit Company for every passenger to have a trip over the entire lines, stopping at places of interest, like the Aquarium, Moana Hotel, etc.

In the forenoon the trolley cars will run about 35 (?) miles to Camp Shafter, up Nuuanu Valley, up Manoa and back to the Royal Hawaiian Hotel, in the center of the city and one of the most tropically beautiful spots in the world, where we have our headquarters and where the first sitting passengers will lunch both days at 11:30 a. m. and the second sitting passengers at 1 p. m.

After lunch take trolley cars, 4 miles, to the Aquarium at beautiful Waikiki beach, then to Moana hotel and the canoe club house, where a surf-board contest and outrigger canoe races will be held in honor of Clark's cruise, Mr. Clark donating two prize cups to the winners of the two races.

Return by trolley car to the ship for dinner at 6:30 and 7:45 p. m.

There is excellent bathing, surfboard riding and canoeing at Waikiki beach and passengers can either take their bathing suits with them from the ship or suits may be hired at the Waikiki hotels. The band plays 3 to 5 p. m. at Moana Hotel (same proprietor as Alexander Young's and Royal Hawaiian hotels.)

Sunday evening 9 p. m. Hawaiian instrumental music and singing on the fine roof garden of Alexander Young's

"And you kept up this talk about him knowing that it meant to him a breach of the peace against him and his family?"

"I knew that Sheba's fear was only pretended," was the answer. I knew how those words were understood by the readers."

Negoro was pressed to admit that he knew about twenty and odd laborers—the question put it thirty—who had returned to work at Waipahu, and that it was against the wishes of the Honolulu Higher Wage Association that they had done so. Also that the Nippon Jiji had published the men's names and the number of the house the returned laborers occupied.

"It was a news item," the witness explained. "It was necessary to give correct information to the reading public. I cannot say what was the purpose of giving the number of the house."

"Did the Higher Wage Association of Honolulu carry out a system of spying?"

"No."

Negoro was asked about an item relating that when a certain man came to town he prostrated himself to the ground.

He answered that the language might imply merely the ordinary Japanese obeisance. His imagination was that the sense was the figurative one of prostration before the Higher Wage Association. He had no knowledge of actual bodily prostration.

hotel (near the dock) in honor of Clark's around the world cruise.

Monday, January 24. Breakfast and dinner at regular hours on the ship. Independent action, for shopping, etc. Lunch at 11:30 and 1 p. m. at the Royal Hawaiian hotel, and ship sails at 5 p. m. sharp.

(The Oceanic line has made a special rate of $50 to San Francisco for any of Clark's passengers wishing to stop-over in Honolulu. Steamers leave Honolulu February 23 and March 16th for San Francisco.)

HERBERT E. CLARK,

General Manager of Cruise No. 1.

Respectfully submitted,

H. P. WOOD,

Secretary.
