Biddell Will Give Another Show

On Wednesday afternoon on the Waikiki beach, opposite the Outrigger Club, Professor Biddell, the life saving expert from the Antipodes, will give an exhibition of his well known work in the line of rescuing people from the breakers and resuscitating the apparently drowned.

Biddell's previous demonstration at the Healan boat shed was attended by a big crowd of interested spectators, and they showed the keenest interest in the proceedings from start to finish.

On Wednesday the exhibition will start at 4:30 o'clock, and all those interested in the matter are invited to attend at the Outrigger Club. The public generally should be interested in the exhibition, as the knowledge of how to save a life that has almost gone is very valuable to everyone who frequents the various watering places.

The Australian life-saver is thinking of going back to his home on the Makura, so there will not be another chance of seeing him at work after next Wednesday.
