
HUME FORD IS BACK HOME.

(Continued From Page 1.)

all the things he has done, moving at the usual rate and under the influence of the lively surroundings of the great metropolis.

The principal thought is that Ford has lost none of his enthusiasm for Honolulu, and the Outrigger Club of today won't be seen for dust when he gets to work on some of the plans he intends to carry out in the future.
