

OUTRIGGER CLUB

The Outrigger boys are getting ready for the arrival of the Clark cruisers, and incidentally they hope to complete their new bath-house in time for the reception to the cruisers on the grounds. It is expected that work will begin on the new and commodious bath-house early in the week.

Even the smallest boys of the club are now coming forward with suggestions, the most urgent of which is that they be admitted to the social chowder for members only, which Captain Brown is arranging for next Saturday.

Horomoto, the old club carpenter, will be placed at work rehabilitating the score or more club canoes, and when the Clark cruisers arrive it is expected that a full Hawaiian village will be in perfect swing.

The members of the Kamehameha Aquatic Club will be invited to participate and the grass houses will be turned over to them for occupancy.

The aquatic features will take place in the afternoon, the surfboarding and surfing contests being for the cup prizes and the sailing canoe races, the six and four-paddle events for cash prizes.

But, after all, the thing that creates the most enthusiasm just now among the club members is that work will begin immediately upon the new bath house.
