

ENTERTAINMENT BY THE OUTRIGGERS

The Outrigger Club is ready for its big entertainment on the tenth of June. Yesterday the gang of workmen and carpenters put the finishing touches on the big addition to the dancing lanai, and today the thatchers begin on the roof. Another gang of carpenters completed the big stage for the McKraes, the company of player folk who are returning to Honolulu on the morning of June ten and will participate in the Outrigger carnival. Still another body of workmen yesterday completed the new hau tree lanai and now all is ready for the big affair next Friday. The chowder will be served in the big eighty by forty foot lanai from five to eight, and again—on the green sward—from eleven to midnight, so that those who come to the dance will not return home supperless after the dance. The Outrigger grounds are becoming known as the place of a thousand cocoanut columns, a hundred of these graceful trunks having been put in place during the past week supporting either roofs or hau tree branches. The grounds are assuming an appearance that is a credit to Honolulu.

It is decided that the sports for the youngsters will begin early during the afternoon next Friday. The Clark cups will be contested for by both boys and girls who ride the surfboard. There will be a feast on the ground all afternoon and evening, and Captain Berger and his band will be there. At eight p. m. the Venetian carnival will begin, when more than a score of illuminated canoes will wend their way from the Hau Tree at Lewers' place on the beach to the Outrigger lagoon. The dance halls at both hotels, and the Outrigger lanai will be cleared for dancing. The electric light company is already busy preparing the myriad of colored lights that are to be strung everywhere, and various ladies' committees are arranging a series of surprises. The membership of the club has, by the way, had a sudden leap. There were fifty-three applications for membership to the men's department during the month of May, and a score or more of applicants from those of the gentler sex. All the members, old and new, are working for the success of the tenth of June.
