

A GAY EVENING AT THE BEACH

The most picturesque feature of the affair was the illuminated canoe sailing. Tourists, kamaainas and malihinis also went into ecstasies over the sight of Japanese-lanterned surfboats riding the waves in the dark. The night was a clear one, with a crescent moon, and the electric illumination and the lantern lights of the canoes made a picture not to be forgotten.

Beginning at five o'clock, a chowder was served to hundreds of guests. At the same time the various booths were liberally patronized, and the club will realize a neat sum from the sales made. The grounds of the Outrigger Club, between the Seaside and Moana hotels, were occupied by prettily decorated booths, at which ladies served refreshments and sold flowers, and before the time for opening the dancing program, late in the evening, they had made handsome realizations.

The Outrigger Club booth was in charge of Mrs. Tuttle, with Mrs. Hall and Mrs. Ramsay as assistants. It was the first one visited by most of the guests. Close by was the lemonade stand, in charge of Mrs. Booth as chairman, with Mrs. Gartley, Mrs. Dutra and Mrs. Mackay as assistants. Many kinds of soft drinks were served here, and nearly everybody gave the booth a call.

Mrs. R. C. Brown presided at the candy booth. With her, to aid in entertaining and receiving visitors, were Mrs. Riedford, Miss Ehrhorn, Miss Jessie Kennedy, Miss Muriel Howatt, Miss Helen Brown, Miss Edna Curtis. With this gathering of salesladies the booth sold candy even to people who might not have wanted it, but for the chance to buy it at this booth.

Tea was served and jams and fruits sold at a booth presided over by Mrs. Graham, Mrs. Eubank and Mrs. Alder. The booth as decorated looked as if it nestled in the midst of an orchard in which were growing all sorts of fruits, from pomegranates to pineapples, and it was a popular visiting place.

Miss Newcomb presided at the coffee booth, another delightfully arranged and decorated corner. With her were Mrs. Fuller, Mrs. Smithies and Miss Lucy Ward. They had a steady stream of visitors and enjoyed their evening task of serving them as much as the visitors enjoyed their calls at the booth.

Ice cream and cake were in general demand, and at times it was hard for those in charge of supplying the visitors with these to keep up with the demands for their services. Mrs. C. Du Roi, Mrs. Galt, Mrs. Murphy, Mrs. Haneberg, Mrs. F. Harris and a number of other young ladies did a hustling business at this booth.

Flowers and leis were sold by the hundred at a booth presided over by Miss Lyons, with the assistance of Mrs. Fred Carter, Miss Roby Case, Miss Gussy Schlemmer, Miss Amy Stratemeyer, Miss Sybil Carter, Miss Dorothy Waldron, Miss Irene Boyd and Miss Holt. The booth was so attractive that a number of visitors were observed buying buttonholes and leis twice over, and a big stock of decorations was disposed of.

Kapellmeister Berger and the county band were present, and helped with the entertainment. The non-arrival of the McRae company on the Mauna Loa yesterday morning left the expected vaudeville program shy, but an improvised program was given, under the direction of W. D. Adams.

Dancing was enjoyed late in the evening on the new platform of the Outrigger Club. The entertainment and floor committee was composed of Frank Armstrong, Harold Giffard, W. H. McInerney and A. Mackintosh.

The members of the Outrigger Club were enthusiastic in their praises of those mainly responsible for the affair, Alexander Hume Ford, as the main mover in the enterprise, being enthusiastically commended. Ford was ably seconded by Mr. Tuttle.
