

BELGIAN JACKIES

FROLIC IN SURF

Have Fun With Boards and Canoes as Guests of Out- rigger Club.

The middies of the Belgian training ship L'Avenir are the guests of the Outrigger Club, and yesterday they had the time of their lives in the big surf. Charles Royal was there to show them what a malihini could do with a surf-board, and Royal's stunts were as funny as those he promises at the Fourth of July show for the Outriggerites.

The middies struggled with the boards, then they tried the canoes, and Belgians were spilled all over the scenery, for the surf ran high, but the boys struggled again and again after bailing out, and fifteen of them have issued a challenge to the malihinis of the Outrigger Club to race with them in six-paddle canoes on the Fourth. They will be provided with steersmen, and the bets are even that the Belgian sailor boys will hoe as effectively as will the town malihinis. Charles Royal has invited the middies to attend the big minstrel and vaudeville show in the Outrigger lanai on the Fourth, and Allan Herbert has asked them to attend his chowder for the workers on that date.

The boys on the training ship L'Avenir come from some of the best families of Belgium. Several years ago one of the Belgian training ships sailed with sixty cadets, but she went down in a storm and but twelve were saved. That is why there are but fifteen boys on the new training ship in port. These fifteen, however, will be entertained on the Glorious Fourth at the Outrigger Club, and Secretary Dickinson will not be more welcome himself than will the young middies.
