

OUTRIGGER CLUB HAS AMBITIOUS PLANS

Twenty new members were taken into the Outrigger Club at the meeting yesterday of the directors in the public service rooms. About fifteen members who have not yet paid their dues for 1912 were given one more week of grace, and if they do not come through with the wherewithal in that time will be permanently dropped.

The new rule that the full year's dues must be paid in advance works like a charm. Over two hundred members came through without delay and laggards are now getting under cover. The club is a couple of thousand dollars to the good and the directors are now able to apportion the year's expenses.

There is still a balance of several hundred from the last entertainment. Yesterday about four hundred of this was appropriated for stone sea walls, moving the grass houses to other locations and a number of minor improvements. The house committee was also instructed to get busy and see that the new men's and boys' bath houses are completed, these having been appropriated for at the last directors' meeting.

The Outrigger Club is now looking for a lively promoter of aquatic events. If a good hustler in this line can be found the public service would gladly put him on salary, as the Trail and Mountain Club and the A. A. U. both need an athletic events promoter, and the public service association is anxious to add such a department to its force of workers.
