

CORRECTING AN ERROR.

An error in typesetting the statement from the Women's Auxiliary of the Outrigger club, published in the society columns of Saturday's Star-Bulletin, made it appear as if the new bath-house project were not fully financed. The error was simply a mechanical one as is shown by the comparison of the "copy", which is in handwriting, and the article as it appeared. The published article said that it is a problem "just how the expense of the new addition to the bath-house with plumbing and lockers, amounting to $700, will be met by the Women's Auxiliary."

"Just here the statement may be made that the entire expense of the new addition to the boathouse with plumbing and lockers amounting to over $700 will be met by the Women's Auxiliary." The error was in the dropping of a line and subsequent efforts to make the sentence read correctly.
