

What the public, is interested in is the question of its rights, which are going out to sea with every ripple. The only way in which those who wish to walk along the beach and get from the Outrigger Club to the private homes Ewa of the Seaside is by going through private property next to the Outrigger, climbing up a fence, walking over the Seaside lawn, through the bathhouse office and rooms, down the steps and then making a jump to land on dry sand.

This condition has lasted for several weeks and there seems no remedy, if the action of the waves is to be counted on for bringing in another sand beach.

The attorney general's department is now looking up the law on the rights of the public, to ascertain just exactly where they begin and end.
