

SMALL CROWDS AT WAIKIKI RESORTS

Showers and High, Cool Winds Keep Holiday Makers At Home

Yesterday was a light day at the Waikiki beach resorts, the attendance at all of the places being small. Showery weather conditions in the morning, followed by a high and cool trade wind in the afternoon, probably had much to do with the smallness of the crowd that went to enjoy bathing and surfing.

However, the beach in front of the Outrigger club was well occupied by bathers, this being at present the chosen spot, especially on a high tide afternoon like yesterday, when the surf comes up to the stone wall at other places, and leaves no sandy beach at all.

At the public baths, despite a reduction in rates, the crowd was not up to the usual size. The city band gave a concert, which kept quite a crowd on the lawn, and held many automobile parties in Kapiolani park. The program was as follows:
