its merits and, if it had any, its demerits. G. H. Buttolph brought the Auxiliary into the discussion, stating that, contrary to the apparent opinions of some, that organization was a genuine friend of the Outrigger Club. This brought a hot reply from J. M. Riggs, who apparently held other opinions. P. L. Weaver took a hand, stating that "the Women's Auxiliary is one of the reasons why we have our present grounds."

It was two hours and a half from the opening of the meeting before the questions finally came to a vote, with the result above noted.

Bylaw Amendment

Secretary J. A. Beaven, after adjournment, stated that a meeting would be called to amend the bylaws, so that the board of directors might be enabled to carry into effect the wishes of the majority of the club as expressed by the advisory vote taken. He and others were outspoken in their characterization of the tactics which had halted immediate action, and added that, notwithstanding the bylaws, the members had for years taken women to the club as their guests.

Before final adjournment President Campbell announced that it was planned to give a series of full moon dances at the Outrigger Club the first to be given November 4
