

Waikiki Discards Stockings

What struck me particularly yesterday was that the ugly black stockings were being discarded and the nymphs took to the water just as naturally, let us hope, as Eve did when Adam first asked her to go in swimming. There has been too much modesty of the limbs heretofore and none at all elsewhere. What I saw yesterday was an improvement and I'm quite sure that the crowd today will enjoy it.

The death-dealing platform is still in commission off the Moana and Outrigger and yesterday there was just three feet of water there. I suppose when some legislator breaks his neck, as persons of other professions have done before, things will be remedied somewhat.
