

WAIKIKI SURF RIDING FILMED FOR "MOVIES"

What will undoubtedly prove the most spectacular and thrilling "movies" of surf riding at Waikiki ever caught by the motion picture camera, have been filmed by Ira J. Ingraham and Louis F. Brown of the Burton Holmes Travelog Corporation.

By removing the tripod and mounting it on a box in the bow of a big outrigger canoe, Cameraman Ingraham was able to follow the same wave which carried the surfing Hawaiians, including Duke Kahanamoku, "Tough Bill" and several others. At the same time R. K. Bonine filmed the riders and canoe from a fixed stand near the Outrigger diving platform.

This week the movie men are filming Haleakala, and from there they will go to the Big Island to "shoot" scenes of interest. Last week they took Waimea and Okolele canyons and the Spouting Horn of Koloa, on Kauai.
