

OUTRIGGER BEACH IS GIVEN CORAL CLEANING

Once more the beach in front of the Outrigger club at Waikiki is free of loose pieces of coral, as the result of the United efforts of the bathers at the coral fishing party yesterday. By evening the bathers had gathered up fully two tons of coral, which heretofore has amused itself in frolicking with the feet and limbs of swimmers who ventured to touch bottom anywhere in the vicinity of the clubhouse.

Signs were sprinkled about the clubhouse which reminded everyone that all were expected to help. While lightly phrased, the signs were effective for it was a poor sport, indeed, who was not induced to get busy when he read a notice admonishing him to "do your bit and save your toes."

An artistic effort in sign work was built of small pieces of coral, bound together with sand water, near the coral pile which admonished, "Do Ur Bit."

So successful was the coral party it is now said the Moana hotel is soon to have a similar one.
