

The question of appointing life patrolmen at the Waikiki Beach, as provided for by the last legislature, was discussed, but definite action went over until the next meeting. The law, Act 201, provides for the appointment of two patrolmen, each of whom is to be paid no more than seventy-five dollars a month. The Outrigger Club wrote, asking that the board pay the salary of a patrolman which it employed some time ago.