

"You're King, Duke" --- Ross

Duke Kahanamoku and Norman Ross, although rivals in swimming, are good friends. These two natators represent two ends of the swimming game. Duke carries everything to the 220 and Ross finishes it up in the long distances. No other two swimmers in the world today could defeat this duo in a meet. Ross is seen here telling Duke what he thinks of the champion's swimming. "You're the king, Duke." "You are the best in the world;" and it doesn't look like there would be any argument over it. This picture shows the intense feeling of hatred which prevails between the two stars. I guess not.
