

Varsity to Mix With Outrigger In Scrim Friday

Owing to the fact that Moiliili field is not available, the football game scheduled between the University of Hawaii and the Outrigger club for Saturday has been called off. When the game was arranged it was not known that the Wai-kiki and Palama elevens were planning to use the field. It was suggested that the game might be played on Cooke field, but the management of the two teams felt that four gridiron contests was slightly more than Honolulu fans could well digest in a single afternoon, especially when they all promise to be such interesting battles as those to be staged Saturday.

The Outrigger and Varsity elevens, however, will meet Friday afternoon at 4:30 in a practise scrimmage on Cooke field. Both teams feel the need of stiff opposition in order to prepare for the hard battles which are slated for the December schedule of the major league. The scrimmage Friday will be a regular game of 10 minute quarters, in which both teams will put forth every effort to win, but there will be no admission charged, and the results will have no significance so far as the championship is concerned.

The Canoemen are taking the field armed with a mass of Harvard football tactics, as passed on to them by their mentor, Dr. Paul Withington. Moreover, they have made a number of recent additions to their squad that make things look anything but bright for a Varsity victory. Among the new men reported as turning out for the beachcombers are Coach Slade of the Punahou Interscholastic eleven and Langenstein of Kanehameha.

Opposed to the duplicate Harvard machine of the surfriders is the strictly western brand of football in vogue at the university under the direction of Coach Eliot. This does not mean that the university type is in any sense inferior to the Harvard, as has been proved in the numerous intersectional contests of the past few years.
