

Outrigger Canoe Club Is Winner of A. A. U. Meet By Three Points Over Deans

Keen Competition Closes With Broad Jump In Which Al Lemes Sets New Island Record and Puts Surfers In Front; Some Great Performances Witnessed

By MIKE JAY

S-O-M-E JUMP!

The Outrigger Canoe Club jumped—broad jumped—to victory in the annual Hawaiian A. A. U. track and field meet's final event at Kamehameha field Saturday afternoon when a total of eight Hawaiian records were toppled and one equalled. The surfers won by a margin of three points over the University of Hawaii which finished with 62 points. Palama was third with 46 points.

Out of the 500 fans who attended Saturday's meet less than 100 remained to see the final event of the program, the broad jump. The crowd left for home, satisfied in their minds that the University of Hawaii, leading in points at the time, would merely add to its total when Ching of the Deans took the broad jump. But they had not counted with Al Lemes, Punahoa academy student and Outrigger Canoe Club athlete, Ching had been doing just under 22 feet while the best Lemes had ever done in his life was a fraction over 21 feet. It looked like a cinch bet for Ching and a sure victory for the Deans.

And it continued to look that way when Ching flew through the air for 21 ft. 9 1/2 in. on his third try. Mind you, Lemes had surprised his backers by doing 21 ft. 6 1/2 in. in his first leap but had not come up to it on his second. He gathered everything he had in the way of courage, stamina and nerve for that last leap. He ran slowly up to the take-off and then unleashed all his frenzy in one heroic desperate effort that seemed to carry him like a bird through the air. Down came his feet and the surfers burst into a loud and prolonged cheer. They knew he had bettered Ching's mark but they did not expect that he had broken the Hawaiian record and covered a total of 23 ft. 1 in.

That leap will go down in history along with the famous one of Steve Brodie's from the Brooklyn bridge.

Other Records

That was the last event but it was the eighth record to fall. The first mark to crumble in the afternoon was in the mile run when Burton Hooper of the Outrigger Canoe Club sliced one and three-fifths seconds from the 4 min. 45 sec. mark set by W. Robinson in 1913. Bill Castanha of Palama gave Hooper a good run but the best surfer set a terrific pace the entire distance. Castanha, as in his wont, opened up his regular sprint as they turned into the stretch. He came abreast of Hooper who turned, gave one look and then stepped on the gas. They pounded down the last 100 yards with Hooper moving into the front inch by inch so that when he crossed the finish line he was more than a yard or two to the good. The second record to fall in the meet was that of the 60-yard dash for women when fair Emily Faria, pleasantly plump, sliced a fifth of a second from Clara Maestera's 3-3 sec. time made last year. Emily pulled a "Charley Paddock" at the finishing line and burst the tape with a flying leap.

"Nurmi" Sanders

N. Sanders of the Outrigger Canoe Club clipped 7-5 sec. from the two-mile mark. Sanders used to be in the navy in the old days when it was composed of "ships of wood and men of iron." And an iron muscled man he is. He runs at a terrific pace that kills off all others. And he keeps it up. There was no question of his victory. He won by 200 yards from Hooper who was tired from his work in the mile event, but came second. The battle for third place was interesting. Mew of the Central "Y" and Heminger of the Deans battled it out down the stretch and the little "Y" lad won by the breadth of a thin hair.

Eight after the two-mile run came the shattering of another record with Teddy Hair of the Deans in the hero role. He slipped a fifth of a second from Simon's mark of 1:31-4 for the furlong set eight years ago. Hair won by a yard from Tasaka, who came from the rear in the stretch. The latter was third after he had given Hair a lot of competition for the major portion of the distance.

Field Events

Herman Clark of the National Guard broke the first of the field records by tossing the iron marble 5 and 1-4 inches farther than he had in the trials Thursday when his best distance had been 63 feet 2 1/2 inches.

Milton Carter, former "Milo" boy who went to the Olympic trials on the coast last year, was in rare form Saturday. First he went over

EIGHTEENTH DAY
MOLLENDO, Peru, February 12.—I am writing this on the shady side of the Santa Lucia, as the old boat slides along the shore. What a dismal, dusty view! The west coast of South America is monotonously forlorn and forsaken. A narrow range of mountains parallels a seaside where rain never falls, and where there is nothing green or growing. The sea is flat and still and the boat seems to be sliding along on top of it instead of through it.

Yet it is all decidedly interesting! The water may be still but it is alive—alive with bird life. This morning I watched the guano birds fly out to sea. Hour after hour, in dark, dense clouds, they poured past from their island roosts near the shore. It is impossible to determine their numbers as they sweep by in long, irregular columns.

Millions in One Colony

Robert Cushman Murphy, who is on board and who knows more about them than anybody, says that a single homogenous colony contains ten millions of birds. The Chirco and Ballestas islands, near Pisco, are black with them, and when Captain Dexter rounded the ship's husky horn, they arose in such cloud as to hide the early rising sun.

The guano (guano-bird)—so-called by the Quetzal Indians since time immemorial—is the most valuable bird in the world and has been truly named the "Billion Dollar Bird." The guano is a dung, or a coprolite, belonging to the white-breasted branch of the family, and is probably the most gregarious thing that flies. There are several others, the albatross, a pelican, being the next in importance.

Birds a Marvelous Sight

I have watched these big birds flap awkwardly and tirelessly along just even with the water, it seems, and in regular formation as if under the command of a leader, but I have yet to see one of them catch a fish. That is not true, however, of the piquero (Spanish for "lancer") as their spectacular plunges into the sea from great heights—as fast and true as an aviator drop—are the constant marvel of all who watch them.

There is no more remarkable sight than that of a cloud of piqueros flying over a large school of fish called anchovetas. Then the air actually rains birds! Suddenly, as if at a given signal, they begin falling precipitately into the water—hundreds at every moment—until within a few seconds practically the whole cloud of feathered fishers has poured itself into the ocean.

Vast Quantities of Fish

Billions of pounds of fish must be consumed each year by the various guano-producing birds. An incalculable quantity is also devoured by other fishes; yet the fea big lead in the first lap that the race was settled then. Eddie Fernandez has a mortgage on the 220-yard low hurdles and won by 10 yards. Meilo nosed out Whittle for second place. Kahofohi of Palama, a Kam runner, took the 300 yards without opposition. The Outrigger team gave the Deans a better argument in the half mile relay but not enough to question the variety's right to the honor. Eddie Gartley, Olympic pole vaulter, won his event easily. Akana of Palama surprised fans by beating Harvey for third place. R. Lehman of the 27th Infantry took the discus throw as expected.

Teamwork

The victory of the Outrigger club was due to teamwork. The surfers battled for every point and Coach Jack Slade, Manager Ralph Ault and Capt. Harold Harvey were busy every minute looking after details. The surfers deserved their win because they never gave up the fight, even when it looked as if all hope was lost after Hartman took second place in the high jump and put the Deans in the lead before the staging of the final event.
