

BEACH CLUB WILL START VOLLEYBALL TILTS DECEMBER

Players Are Divided Into Different Classes; Much Interest Shown

The first week in December will start play in the Outrigger Canoe club volleyball league. The committee, consisting of Joseph Farrington, Thomas McGrath and Bill McLean, met and decided on the various classes for this year's tournament.

The games last year demonstrated the popularity of dividing the classes. The new groups that will be formed have experienced players who will make it interesting for the champions of last year.

The single men's class will lose many of last year's stars. They have graduated from that class and must now compete for the "poor married men." The other groups will be the same with the single men, school boys, kamaainas (15 years in Hawaii), and the malahinis.

The five classes will commence play as soon as the committee in charge of the series receives the official entries which close November 30 with the chairman of the volleyball league.

There should be increased interest this year as a formidable team will be entered in the coming open A. A. U. championships, which promises to be greater and more keenly fought than last year's games.
