

Outrigger Club Has Men Training For Coming Track Meet

From swimming to track work may be a far cry, but nothing is too much for the athletic members of the Outrigger Canoe Club. This organization has formed a track team which will be heard from in the coming meets.

It has been rumored—that the Outrigger would merge with the Pan-Pacific Club in track events, but this is not so, for the beach warmers are out to show under their own colors what they have in them. Joe Stickney, who is good at amalgamation, seems to have been unsuccessful here, for the Pan-Pacificers will have no kokua from the Outriggers in this instance.

“We have a good bunch of likely athletes,” said “Dad” Center yesterday. “Dad” is the center of athletic circles at the Outrigger and he knows what he is talking about.

“We are going to make the other teams work some in track events and they will know that we are in the running. You know, track work helps develop swimmers and the latter make good track men. Anyhow, we will be in the swim in land athletics.”
