

At the Pan-Pacific club lunch yesterday the artists, engineers and architects got together and organized for weekly luncheon meetings at which practical plans for city beautifying as well as for rehousing, amid artistic surroundings, will be laid for both city and plantations.

The meeting was called to order by Lionel Walden who, before proceeding to business, announced he had been commissioned by the Outrigger Club to present Sculptor Gordon Usborne, with a gold wrist watch in recognition of the kindness of the sculptor in showing how cement cocoanut columns could be cast to exactly replace the cocoanut columns under the lanais at the Outrigger club, always a feast for the borer.
