
THREE NEW MEN TURN OUT WITH OUTRIGGER

(Special Star-Bulletin Correspondence.)

The results of last Saturday's contest with the College of Hawaii has stirred the Outrigger club to such a point that it is working its head off this week in preparation for the return game with the college bunch this coming Saturday. Although outplayed by the Hawaii students in their initial game the Surfriders are determined that the results of this week end's battle will show a marked improvement in their playing ability.

Coach Inman is working the squad to the limit these nights, and is endeavoring to overcome the team's one difficulty, which is lack of fighting spirit. No team can expect to come through with a victory unless it has the fighting spirit, and unless the Surfriders display considerably more ambition and pep they will have difficulty in annexing the long end of the scores throughout the season this year.

There are three new players turning out with the Outrigger squad this week, and more new faces will be seen on the squad before the season is half way through. Chris Willis, Walter Bryant and Stan Waldron are the new candidates who are turning out regularly.
