

Sands Are Shifting On Waikiki Beach

Shifting sands at Waikiki beach have so filled in front of the Moana Hotel that one has to walk out farther than the end of the hotel pier to get into water waist deep. Bathing in front of the hotel is ideal for the children now though there is something of a hike to deep water for the older folks though those who wear bathing suits for the effect on spectators do not mind. The drifting sand has, however, covered the coral so that a fine sandy bottom extends from the shore far toward the reef. The stream between the Moana and the Outrigger Club has again broken its barriers and is sweeping into the sea directly in front of the Outrigger property.
