TODAY at 4:30 in the War Memorial Natatorium the second meet of a series of three Hawaiian open swimming championship meets will be held. This meet should be one of the fastest staged this year as many new organizations have entered with swimmers who are capable of making very creditable times for the events they have entered. And fast times are expected of them, as they had yesterday to rest due to the cancelling of the scheduled trials.

Swimmers are doping out the team trophy. Members of the rival clubs are busy counting up the club standings, and are putting their heads together trying to figure out the possible winners of today's events.

The one team that will bear watching is the Waialua A.C. These youngsters got off to a late start in the championships because of a misunderstanding of the time the last swimming meet was to have been held, and as a result, they are ready to swim at 7:30 instead of the scheduled time of 4:30. However, they vowed to be on hand today long before the officials enter the tank. If one doesn't believe that they have their eyes on the title he has but to say to one of the swimmers, "They say you haven't a chance to win the club title" and he will get a snappy comeback.

FEATURE EVENT

The 400-yard Hawaiian championship swim for men will be the main event of today's program. While it is predicted by some that the Honolulu swimmers will take the places, it is also said by those wise in the ways of swimmers that the Waialua entries will surprise the field by
