

Canoes

(Continued from Page 10.)

to pit their strength against the brawn from the Hui Nalu and Out-rigger crews. The showing the surfers made in their first races in Kona heartened and strengthened their morale. The races, the paddlers from the new club expect to shine in are the junior events.

The Hui Nalu paddlers look husky and strong and able to take care of any one anywhere and any place. John D. Kaupiko is recognized by the crews as the accepted coach. Kaupiko is a veteran in the canoe racing sport and is an authority in the field. The Kaupiko family has its representative in Kona; for a Kaupiko headed the Kona crews in the last regatta. John D. expressed his intention of entering a crew in the wahine race. If he does so the race will be closely contested.

To date there has been an absence no fluke, he's back in our town to do it all over again. This time at the Polo Grounds and over the long, 15-round haul on September 18. In granting Canzoneri a return bout within three months after he took the lightweight championship, Ross not only violated all the sacred traditions of boxing but proved his heart as well. What we mean is, only a game guy would get right back in there with a fellow who gave him hell three ways from the deuce for eight rounds. Particularly when his title is on the line.

CRAVES BOUT

But Barney actually seems to crave another brawl with the squat, two-fisted little whirlwind from down New Orleans way.

"You see," he explained on his arrival, "while I thought I won clean-of the "Big Six" crew in the workouts, it is hoped that they will be on hand in the regatta to face the starter's gun.