

President's Possible Visit to Kona

President Roosevelt has expressed the desire to do some big game fishing during his visit to Hawaii in July, and quite naturally any program that is arranged for his entertainment will include this as a feature. Since the Kona coast is the ideal place for this sport and the annual outrigger canoe races are to be held in those waters, arrangements will probably be made which will take the President to Kona for the races and for a try at the great sporting fish which strike there with more vim and vigor than anywhere else.

The races are to be held on July 28, which date is likely to fall during Mr. Roosevelt's stay in the Islands. The ancient sport of outrigger racing would appeal strongly to the President's red-blooded love of the sea, and his attendance on that occasion would be one of the high spots of his vacation. As a deep-sea fisherman, he qualifies as an expert, and he would probably do some memorable things to those up-and-coming swordfish, tuna and ulua who would probably appreciate the distinction of being caught by the President of the United States.
