

WAHINES AND KANES FLASH PADDLES FOR CANOE CLASH

Training for the canoe regatta off the Moana park waterfront July 4, is in full swing. No. 1, a crowd of paddlers and supporters watching the work. Senior wahines of the Outrigger club are in No. 2. From left—Lily Forrest, Andy Lane, Belle Kolberg, Mildred Hooper, Olga Clark and Barbara Schmitt. Molly Akana, in No. 3, proves that paddling makes for beauty, and Frances Matson, No. 4, proves she knows her paddle, which she wields for Outriggers.

Here we are among the men. "Stepinout" Rego, of Queen's Surfriders, in No. 5, is a fine type the sport produces. In No. 6 Melvin Pans, in the bow, is setting a cracker pace for this Hui Naha crew. John Doe, veteran coach, follows with advice in an outboard canoe. No. 7 shows Willie Whittis, coach, handing out some commands to his men of the Queen's Surfriders crews. A sprit paddle of a mile along the long waterfront is a stern test for the best of them. In No. 8 Sunny Long leads in Queen's Surfriders crew, maybe pleased the day's work is over. On the sidelines routine is forgotten by some of them. Melvin Pans and Louisa Lenson, for example, find it pleasant sitting on the wall and minding their own joint business. So much so that teammates describe them as "the Cupid couple." What a good time! Cupid must have if all his work is as good looking as this!—Captions and pictures by John Williams, Star-Bulletin staff photographer.
