noy other bathers.

4. Don't allow your dog to swim, shake water on sun bathers or dig in the sand.

5. Don't throw sand, wet or dry, at your friends, without thinking of others whom it may strike.

6. Don't openly tipple from a bottle on the beach or become boisterously drunk.

7. Don't swear or use obscene language while on the beach.

8. Don't be a "water clown," annoying other bathers who may be swimming in the water near you.

9. Don't throw lighted cigarettes on the sand where barefoot bathers may step on them.

10. Don't be a "masher," forcing your attentions on others when they are not wanted.

Little trouble is expected to rid the beach of these offenses, Minor indicated, since, he said, they undoubtedly are committed by persons who failed to think about the "other fellow." One warning by beach guards is usually enough, he said, to stop discourteous actions on the beach.

Ted Waters, Royal Hawaiian beach attendant, and Hiram Anahu, of the Moana hotel, are cooperating with Minor in his efforts to rid Waikiki of "beach pests."
