

Those crowds one sees on the Outrigger Canoe club's volleyball courts are due to the tournament.

The Outrigger is now in the torrid heats of its annual volleyball championships. Every day the members get together and have their "blood" and "go for broke" games. Right now the canoe clubbers under George (Dad) Center are in the thick of the battle. Championships are being fought out in doubles and teams.

After the volleyball tournament the club will give canoe sailing events to instruct the junior members in the ancient art of sailing the big outriggers. This is one of the most thrilling and tricky of the old Hawaiian sports. With the new program which the Outrigger club has inaugurated there ought to be a revival in the interest of canoe sailing.

To instruct the youngsters the club has detailed Tommy Kiakona in charge. Preparations are now being made for the canoes rigging and sails to be in shipshape order for the spring blows when the canoes will take to the water in all their glory of canvas.

This promises to be a rare scene for the Waikiki visitor as there is no prettier sight than outrigger canoes sailing through the surf at the beach.
