

Outrigger Club Building Opened

Without elaborate ceremony, the new Outrigger club buildings were opened Saturday noon.

President Walter J. Macfarlane and a group of directors met at the main entrance at noon and opened the door. During the afternoon and evening many members and their families visited the handsome new quarters.

Formal Opening Later

The formal opening ceremonies, however, will not take place for another two or three weeks, as certain parts of the club are not yet complete.

Open Into Lobby

The main doors open into the lobby of the building housing lockers and showers. In the lobby's center is an information desk and notions counter, surrounded by the modern offices of the Outrigger club business staff.

On one end of the building are the dressing and shower facilities for men. To the other side are the women's dressing rooms, and just off these are the boys' locker and shower quarters.
