There was nothing but good news for the Soichi Sakamoto fund at QB's Monday noon meeting atop of Smile Cafe.

Iwao Miyake, acting athletic director at the university, had Andy Johnson, the Baltimore Oriole, cheeping gaily with his report on how the kids on the campus were kicking in to send their coach to the Olympics.

Andy, who's chairman of the Sakamoto fund, grinned even broader when Bob Corbaley announced that the Outrigger Canoe club voted $100 to the fund.

The presentation will be made by Duke Kahanamoku directly to Mr. Sakamoto.

The goal set has not yet been reached. But if things continue as they have been, there will soon have to be an added collection to buy Soichi a monocle to sport in jolly old London. He's that close to getting there.

Lenny has some definite plans about boxing bouts that will bring gladness to the hearts of the Hawaiian fans. For instance, he has Bernie Docusan, No. 2 welter, committed in writing to journey here for a bout.

He has a cable from Sugar Ray Robinson, a man fearless in the ring but afraid to death of ocean travel. "I can't swim to Hawaii," wired Sugar Ray, "but I can take
