

Tribute To Walter J. MacFarlane

July issue of Outrigger Club Forecast is a memorial to the late Walter J. MacFarlane, president of the club in 1939 when it was encountering lean times and dark discouragement. County Attorney Wilford D. Godbold, current president, pays high tribute to Mr. MacFarlane's loyalty to the club and to the ability he displayed in selling bonds and building the present clubhouse by surmounting terrific obstacles.

Paul McGinnis, author of a recent best seller, "Lost Eden," and Mrs. McGinnis are visiting Hawaii. At the invitation of Manager Magill, the author wrote some of his recollections of the Outrigger Club after twenty years. With tongue in cheek, he wondered what had become of those young fellows Duke Kahanamoku and Lorrin P. Thurston, the latter then secretary of the club. He said he couldn't describe how he felt to renew membership in the club after two decades without using "fire-crackers."

Thomas Gage's picture is published with the suggestion that it will be easier for him to attend meetings of Outrigger directors now that he has left the Young hotel downtown to manage the Niualu at the beach, a slander on punctual "Tommy". Altogether Editor E. W. Stenberg has presented an attractive issue. Not least interesting among its contents—from members' standpoint—is a five months financial statement showing that the club was "in the black" in April and May.
