

Outrigger Club Plans $50,000 Improvement Job

Wilford D. Godbold, president of the Outrigger Canoe club, announced today that plans have been drawn up for improvements and changes in the club.

Vladimir Ossipoff, who is engaged as architect, has drawn up detailed plans and specifications which were accepted by the building supervisory committee and the board of directors of the club.

Bids were received from E. Fitzsimmons, James Glover, James Clark, Nordic Construction Co., Hawaiian Dredging Co., Pacific Construction Co., and C. W. Winstedt.

Bids were opened on September 9 and at a meeting held on September 14 the board of directors directed that the contract be given to James Clark.

His bid was most favorable, totaling $39,300 and offering to complete the job in 115 days.

This construction cost with furnishings and other items will cover a total investment of approximately $50,000.

The Outrigger Canoe club has been in its present home for some 10 years with practically no major changes.

Plans will provide for enlargement of the sun deck offering better facilities for small parties and a game room, extensive changes in the dining room, a direct entrance to the dining room and to the beach and an addition on the ewa side of a modern cocktail lounge and bar.

Included will be the erection of a separate building for a soda fountain and snack bar.

Mr. Godbold stated that "in spite of the strike and present accompanying conditions, the directors have faith in the future of Hawaii and want members and guests to receive the best accommodations."
