FIREMEN merged full force on the Outrigger Canoe club with three fire engines Monday afternoon and disappeared into the girls' locker room.

The bravest man on the beach, Neal Ifverson, led the party to where the mysterious smell had last been detected.

After a search of lockers and a few confusing moments about the locker room for unsuspecting bathers the "blaze" was located.

A smouldering towel, found not in the girls', but the boys' dressing room, was the cause of all the commotion.
