

THANKSGIVING weekend at Waikiki lived up to the travel folder pictures of life in the Paradise of the Pacific while storms wreaked havoc on the mainland United States.

While occasional rains fell elsewhere on Oahu, Waikiki was as sunny as usual and abounded with beachgoers.

The center of much attention were Duke and Nadine Kahana-moku at the Outrigger club Sunday. It was their first appearance together since Duke's return from the mainland.

While volleyball contestants vied back and forth on the inside courts, canasta fans competed in the sun across the way. Holding cards were Mrs. Jack Ackerman, Mrs. Jimmy Beardmore, Mrs. Jack Cross and Miss Eva Hunter.

IN ANOTHER huddle in the sun was the conversational knitting group turning out Christmas and baby things.

Every now and then ball players, knitters, canasta and cribbage players would head for the surf to cool off.

Seen in the non-exercising group in the fenced off area within reaching distance of both Outrigger and the Royal bars were the Spencer Weavers and Dick Fairservice.
