KAILUA, Oahu, Oct. 24—Acquisition of the former Navy Kailua Oficers Club Annex is being discussed by the Outrigger Canoe Club and the newly-organized Congregationalist Church of Kailua.

The Navy's lease with the Kaneohe Ranch Company for the Kalaheo Avenue site expires in December.

The ranch company recently announced the property is available for other use.

The two competing organizations are interested in acquiring the property for development of their organizations' facilities.

WINDWARD BRANCH

The Outrigger Cnoe Club hopes to establish a Windward branch and build up its membership in the area.

Tentatively, the Kailua Congregationalists plan to erect a church building on the mauka end of the property and use the recreational facilities of the annex for Oahu's congregational churches.

The main building of the Kailua club was destroyed by fire several months ago and it is reported that $33,000 of insurance money is available to the next tenant.

The money is to go toward repairing the club dining room, kitchen and dancing area.

The property now has several guest cottages, tennis, volleyball, badminton and basketball courts, a large driveway and a parking area.
