

BOATS BURY HATCHET, CREWS GET TO WORK

Parker Puts Up Cup for Fat Men's Race—Hawaiian Paddlers Shifty.

There has been considerable stimulus given into rowing circles of late, and rivalry between factions has been going for the past two days that it has superseded politics in intensity of discussion on the streets. Backing up the enervating lectures of soft talk and much mush about what a nice life follows the Healanis and Myrtles is the fact they are working to pull a high-pressure regatta and what a lot of races they are going to have for the men.

They began to brood over the halcyon days of ulterior motives, which in the past have developed dark and disquieting shadows threatening dissolution of crews.

The meetings that emanated from the sectious spirits tickled the ears of their adversaries, and the latter found it right out that they were annoyed. This awoke the ones with the aggressive, and they got up with a bad case in their mouths.

After waging a war of words, all sides were straining with renewed vigor to take redress for imaginary wrongs. If they can keep themselves together just a few days longer, the regatta might in spite of themselves win out.

Hawaiian Crew Husky

The Hawaiian outrigger crew has arrived from Kona and they are a husky looking lot, much larger on the average than the haoles. They paddle very differently than the local crew, but Capt. Rusty Brown thinks his crew has the better stroke. The Hawaiians do four short strokes and shift while the haoles execute fifteen long sweeps between shifts. The Kona crew tears it off at a high rate but Brown's men seem to hold their own at the pace. Rusty says theoretically the fifteen stroke way is the best.

Shell Race Sure Off

The Myrtle shell crew made an informal call upon the Healanis yesterday to ask their pleasure regarding the proposed shell race and the Healanis' final answer was that it was off. The Myrtle crew have put in some strenuous training for this event and they feel so much physical benefit from the exercise that they have decided to keep up the good work anyhow.

Bob Thompson, who has been pulling stroke on the Healanis freshman crew has strained himself and has been obliged to quit the game for a while. Frank James, who originally held this position will go back on the job. Capt. Bert Heilbron has picked his two pair-oar crews. Bill James and Charles Brown make up the freshman pair and the seniors are Bert Heilbron and Joe Kamaian. Harold Dillingham had the Healanis' freshman in hand yesterday afternoon and Paul Jarrett was back on the job with the seniors. The Healanis are the only ones who think they haven't got a chance. The official photographer from The Advertiser went down to get a likeness of them yesterday afternoon and they said, "What's the use. We're not going to win."

WILKINSON WILL RACE JOE FREITAS AT RINK

George Wilkinson, the Oregon Wonder, is going to skate against Joe Freitas, one of the local speed artists next Sunday night at the rink. Young Freitas has made a pretty good showing in skate marathons and he is not afraid to take on the Portland boy whom Joe Forrest defeated two weeks ago. The race will be for a purse.
