

MYRTLE CREWS ROW TO VICTORY IN REGATTA DAY EVENTS

ONE EVENT IS TAKEN BY HEALANIS

Oared Race.

CLUBS AND WHARVES THROUGED BY CROWDS

Victory crowned the Myrtles one more today in what seems assured to go down as the most successful Regatta Day Honolulu has ever enjoyed.

The races were keenly contested and exciting, and the weather was ideal.

No Flags on Yachts.

One thing which was remarked on the Hawaii was that none of the sailing craft were decorated for Regatta Day. Nearly all the steam craft in the harbor were showing bunting and flags, but of the whole fleet of sailers anchored off the Myrtle club there was not one which deemed for the day.

Clubs Entertain.

At the clubhouses both balconies were crowded, as well as the windows which commanded a view of the course. Music was furnished during the lulls in the racing events.

Impromptu dances were held from time to time, and during nearly all the time the musicians were playing there were some couples on the floor—most of the time it was crowded.

Both clubs were excellent hosts, and refreshments in great quantities were served.

Post Mortem Held.

There were many post mortems held after the events were finished. This was especially true of the fat men's race. Thompson said it was CHILLINGWORTH, and the latter said it all to Thompson—all in a friendly spirit.

As a matter of fact, Thompson says that the course was ten miles long instead of half a mile. He was so near all in before the finish that he thought he was hitting the coxswain in the Ta'e each time he took a stroke.

Hawaii Entertained.

On the Hawaii refreshments were packed down below, and it was open house to everyone on board.

Saved the Day.

It was the junior pair-oar race that saved the day for the Healanis, their crew winning this event by a couple of lengths and thus keeping the Myrtles from raising the "clean sweep" sign from their house—a thing they have done for the past five years in regular regattas.

Senior Six-Oared Barge.

1—MYRTLES.
2—HEALANIS.

At five minutes past nine the Myrtle crew took the water and, amid cheers, rowed off to the starting point of the first race. The Healanis were a few minutes later, and then, too, were given a rousing cheer as they pulled down to the starting wharf.

The Race.

It was just 3 o'clock when the six-oared barge of the Healanis cut off from the float and cheered from an immense throng on the channel wharf and a crowded gallery in their own clubhouse.

The Myrtles were already on their way to the starting line, and were slowly followed by the second barge. At 9:20 the starting gun was fired and the two boats leaped away up from the starting line between the Hackfield and Inter-island wharves.

Great Cheers.

There were tremendous cheers from the crowds filling all available standing room on neighboring wharves, and as the barges swept on their way, launches bearing officials and spectators followed closely in their wake.

The Myrtles had the inside course at the start, and as the crew hit the water, when the flag went down, the Healanis went to it at a great pace. The Myrtles hit up a slower, steady stroke, and were taking it easy.

Passing the judges' boat, on the way up to the turn, the Myrtles were leading by two boat lengths.

Down the long stretch to the entrance of the harbor the crews battled for supremacy.

After getting away first and holding the lead for a time, the Healanis slowly dropped behind the Myrtles and the latter rounded the outer mark five lengths in the lead.

At the Turn. The crews were making a stroke of thirty-two past before reaching the first turn, and after the turn was made the Myrtles increased their lead until at the time of passing the Myrtles' clubhouse they were fully ten lengths in the lead.

The Finish.

The Myrtles led all the way and won with the greatest ease by some twenty lengths. The time was Myrtles, 14 min. 44.4-5 sec.; Healanis, 15 min. 37.3-5 sec. It was a boiler race and caused no excitement.

Freshman Six-Oared Barge.

1—MYRTLES.
2—HEALANIS.

A good start saw both crews hit the water at the same moment. The Myrtles, rowing in the AM, Rogers tried to get away, but the Healanis stuck to them. At the Myrtle shed the Healanis led by half a length and were rowing well. At the turn the boats were nearly abreast, but the A.M. Rogers came around quicker than the Healanis, and the race seemed to be a good one. On the home stretch the boats raced neck and neck, and no one could pick the winner.

Passing the Myrtle shed the Myrtles hit up a great pace and walked away from the Healanis. Increasing their lead at every stroke, the Myrtles flashed over the line winners by ten lengths. Times: Myrtles, 11 min. 34.4-5 sec.; Healanis, 15 min. 0.4-5 sec.

Special Pair Oar.

1—MYRTLES.
2—HEALANIS.

Prince Kuhio and Alex. Robertson were the first out, and they got a great cheer as they paddled to the starting point. Charles Chillingworth and Frank Thompson came over to the judges' boat, and they raised a huge laugh by each holding a cigar in his mouth. Even the cox. had a cigarette to pull at, and the joke was a good one.

Charles Chillingworth and Thompson cheered their friends and were the cause of cheers.

The boats got to the starting line and there was much jolting from everybody. Offers of towing lines were thrown out broadcast, and the oarsmen laughed.

Right at the start it was apparent that there was going to be a
