

BEN WOOD

OUTRIGGER CANOE racing competition between Hui Nalu and the Outrigger Canoe Club is fierce, but when it comes to singing team songs, Hui Nalu wins hands down. At least that's how it was last weekend at a large gathering of canoe paddlers on the Outrigger's home grounds. A spirited Sarge Kahanamoku led the Nalus in harmonious song and they made the rafters ring, while the Outriggers, with composer Alex Anderson leading them in the song he composed, came in a poor second. The Outrigger gang needs more song practice. But this was not a night for competition. It was a friendly get-together primarily organized by Pat Olds, who in younger days paddled for both Hui Nalu and Outrigger. Pat had help from Bob Fischer, Roy Kesner and Moku Froiseth . . .

AMONG THOSE ATTENDING were 91-year-old Kaniau Evans, who paddled for Hui Nalu in 1912; John D. Kaupiko, whose dad John D. Sr. was one of the Hui Nalu fathers; George Young, a founder of Waikiki Surf Club; and vintage beach types such as Jimmy Hakuole, Turkey Love, Hazel Hartwell, Nadine Kahanamoku, Josephine Hopkins Garner, Kathleen Perry, Anita Cummins, Walter "Buster" McGuire, Herbert Taylor, Johnny Ernstberg, Red McQueen, Toots Minvielle, Tony and Peaches Guerrero, Anita Kahanamoku, Fred Paoa, Kelly

Campbell, Splash Lyons, Scoop Tsuzuki, Charley Lambert, Kalakaua Aylett, Jimmy Whittle, Nip Tong Akona and Adrian and Mae Brash. Fred Hemmings was emcee. Paddles were awarded to Wally Froiseth, Ward Russell and Kenneth "Enay" Makinney for their contribution to the sport. Patty Makinney Dunn accepted for her dad who was out of town. Paddlers are a hungry lot and they devoured a first-class buffet dinner set up by Outrigger manager Ray Ludwig. A strolling trio composed of Mona Teves, Jacob Kaleikini and Bill Bright, played and sang during the evening. When the musicians came to Alex Williams' table he requested "Alika." The trio complied and up stepped Girlie Kaupiko, who did a delightful, impromptu hula. It was a good night . . .

Evans

STAR-BULL REPORTER

June Watanabe deserves a big pat on the back. She finished her work week on Friday and was expected back at her desk the following Monday. But instead of coming to work Monday, June gave birth to a son, Nicholas Akio, who weighed in at 7 pounds, 1 ounce at Kapiolani Children's Hospital. June's tough. Proud papa is KHON-TV's Richard Borreca . . . Hiram Fong Jr.'s open-air Lobster Cove, at the rear of the Oceania's top deck, offers a fantastic view of Honolulu Harbor and of the vessels that glide by. In earlier days the Oceania chef had living quarters there . . . A new Mexican restaurant, Por Favor,